Judy Grahn is a feminist and an anti-war activist.

You know there was a real craziness that was starting to come in uh to what had been in San Francisco uh the flower power, the very peaceful uh movement and was now getting uh much more volatile. That—the violence was amping up, the violence in the war was amping up, and the violence here was amping up at the same time. So, it was like it was all one war that was going on, the one in Vietnam and the one here.
